Successful Strategies

- Innovative and effective examples of Maryland’s Children’s Cabinet financing strategies:
  - Enter School Ready to Learn: establishing a common goal across government.
  - Earned reinvestment: using incentives and flexible funding to address a critical problem.
In 1999 the Children’s Cabinet and the Joint Committee on Children, Youth and Families selected “Children Entering School Ready to Learn” as the first result area to be addressed through a legislative and executive branch joint effort.

In 2001 Senate Budget and Taxation Committee held joint hearings with the House Appropriations Committee on the result area “Children Entering School Ready to Learn” with the Children’s Cabinet reporting on collective strategies.

Response to low numbers of children who were ready for Kindergarten
Enter School Ready to Learn

• Statewide: Early Care and Education Subcommittee of the Children’s Cabinet Five Year Action Agenda
  - Quality care and education programs
  - Supporting parents
  - Accessing range of health and mental health services
  - Training for early care and education staff
  - Public engagement
  - Accountability

• Local: Leadership in Action and Local Plans
  - Baltimore City Leadership in Action Program (BLAP) formed, with 50 community leaders, public officials, parents, and early childhood care and education providers
Enter School Ready to Learn

Statewide - 49% to 81% full readiness in 10 years.

Baltimore City – In the first year, 13 percentage point increase in the number of children who entered school ready to learn.

Data compiled by the Maryland State Department of Education
Earned Reinvestment was a program that incentivized local jurisdictions to participate in the State’s goal of reducing the number of out-of-State placements.

The incentive was dollars that a Local Management Board “earned” from the savings realized as a result of returning or diverting children from out-of-State care.

Response to a high number of youth who were placed in out-of-State residential facilities.
During the late 1980s, the number of youth served out-of-state in residential placements had reached unacceptable levels, in 2001 the number had fallen to 94.

GOC managed the State Coordinating Council, which reviewed every case recommended for out-of-state placement.

LMBs managed the local process for diverting or returning children from out-of-State placement.
Earned Reinvestment

- State created a “backpack” - a case rate based on the average 2 year cost of an out-of-state placement.
- LMBs provided “backpack” amount for services to return or divert a child from out of State placement.
- LMBs eligible to retain the remainder of any “backpack”, based on successfully maintaining the child in the community for 3 years.
- Calculated cost savings = earned reinvestment funds for LMBs.
  - To be used to develop community-based resources.
• More than 500 youth returned home to Maryland to a community-based placement.

• Millions of dollars infused in the jurisdictions for community-based services.
Earned Reinvestment

Examples of projects funded with the savings that were locally-determined:

- Start-up and year 1 costs for a Nurse Family Partnership program.
- Year 1 expenses related to a mental health therapist at a Child Advocacy Center.
- Initial expenses for local schools implementing the Positive Behavior Interventions and Support (PBIS) program.
- Materials and equipment for start-up of a Child Advocacy Center, youth homeless shelter, a community center, and other community-based facilities.

With continuation funding through other State and federal funding sources.
Lessons Learned

The last 41 years have taught us that interagency and state/local collaboration is fundamental to improving outcomes. It is also fragile and requires:

- A mandate that requires both the cross-system effort and the desired outcomes (using Results-based Accountability);
- A commitment by the leadership (Executive and Legislative);
- Neutrality and dedicated staff support;
- Commitment to local decision-making and authority;
- An accountability system that allows the State to trade flexibility for accountability with the local jurisdictions;
- Embedded and ongoing technical assistance; and
- Continuous engagement and education of stakeholders.
